

I oppose any relaxation of the requirement that ILECs share their networks with ILECs or other resellers.

Smilar rulings with regard to cable broadband sharing has already had the effect of creating monopolies in that market, severely reducing consumer choice and stifling competition in quality and range of services. I am very disapopinted, though not surprised that the FCC is now poised to do the same with broadband over the telephone network.

This only reinforces the widespread public opinion that the Government and the FCC is more interested in toadying up to large corporations with their lobbyists and political contributions than truly being an advocate for the consumer and citizen.
